SCHOOL TO OPEN TUES. SEPT 4

LARGE ATTENDANCE EXPECTED. MANY FOREIGN PUPILS ENROLLED.

Several New Teachers. All On H. S. Faculty Have Degrees.

The schools of Grayling will open Tuesday, September 4th. Everything is in readiness for opening day. The buildings are clean and everything about the premises spic and span.

There has been a lot of changes made in the teaching force this year. Ever since last spring Supt. B. E. Smith has been on the watch for the best teachers he could secure, and now he is smiling all over as the results of his efforts. He is very enthusiastic over the corps of teachers he has engaged. Every teacher on the high school faculty is possessor of a college degree and ranks high in educational circles. The teachers of the grades and the special teachers all come with high-recommendations as to their scholarship and teaching ability.

At this time the last end of August, the question arises in the minds of many people, where are our boys and girls to go to school? That question is easily answered for the people living in the vicinity of Grayling. Grayling schools are modernly equipped and supplied with teachers that are fully capable to handle the subjects for which they have been selected.

Also there is opportunity for people who cannot go to school full time. Arrangements may be made for part-time attendance. This privilege applies also to the commercial course graduates from which department are in great demand, and more positions are open than there are people to fill them.

The list of teachers for the coming year, with the name of subjects or grades to be taught, the name of the college in which they received their training and their home addresses, in the above rotation, are as follows:

Old Roman Expression.

"Ultima Thule" was an expression used by the ancient Romans to denote the most northerly part of the world known to them. Pliny says that it was an island in the northern ocean discovered in the Fourth century B. C. by the navigator Pytheas of Massilia, who reached it after a six-day voyage from Orceades. This region has been variously identified by modern writers with Norway, Iceland, Denmark, the Orkney Islands and especially with the Shetland Islands. "Ultima Thule" is often used as a synonym for a remote, unknown region, or for an unattainable goal.

Forest Problems Acute.

Every year makes the forest problem of the United States more clear, says Col. William B. Greeley, chief of the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. The problem has two main features. The first feature is the rising cost of timber products, which is due primarily to heavier transportation charges from more and more distant sources of supply. The second feature is the unproductive condition of immense areas of land which are not adapted to agriculture.

SYNOPSIS—On the isolated Meager ranch, on the southern border, Deborah Meredith, trained nurse, is in attendance on Mrs. Meager, whose husband has recently been killed. Immediately after the death, Bob Meager, Mrs. Meager's son, arrives and takes possession. He insults Deborah, and she resolves to leave, but there seems no possibility of her getting away. Meager gloats over Deborah's plight. He tells her he has sent for a Justice of the peace, who will marry them tomorrow. Heartbroken, the girl secures a revolver.

She was alone—alone! Beyond law, justice, mercy even, without a friend, a hope; a mere atom left to perish at the will of a brute. Even God had deserted her.

Her wrist watch had stopped, and she possessed no knowledge of the time, yet surely it must be late. The respite now would be short; those who were coming to carry out this mockery could not be delayed much longer. She even hoped now they would come; anything was better than this uncertainty, this horror of waiting.

She wandered where Bob Meager was, and what he was doing. There was no movement about the house, except that of the cook in the detached kitchen. The fellow's regular work would have been completed long ago; no doubt he was busily preparing some sort of feast with which to celebrate the wedding. The wedding! Her wedding! There was the harsh mockery of laughter in her voice as she repeated over aloud the frantic words, Her wedding! Girl-like she had wondered often what it would b*ay like*. And now it was here; she was actually waiting the hour, the moment, and the husband; the man whom Fate or the devil had brought to her? He was waiting, too, no doubt, alone in the front room yonder, drinking himself into a reckless courage, becoming a greater demon with every moment of delay. It was too much, too much.

The very heart seemed to go out of her, and she buried her face in her arms in the soft, silken body shaking with sobs which could no longer be restrained.

Suddenly her ears caught the distant sound of horses' hoofs through the silence, and she sat up, gasping for breath, once more clutched by fear. Yes, they were actually coming, the end was already at hand; he had not lied to her, not merely threatened—he was really brute enough to carry out the mad scheme. She was upon her feet, standing motionless and rigid, back beyond view, when the little party rode up to the main door of the ranch-house, which opened at their approach, a startling beam of light flashing within.

There were but three in the company, all men. Two of the faces she could not distinguish at all; one a rather trim figure, sitting his saddle like a cavalry man; the other a humping, decidedly ungainly fellow, topped with a broad Mexican sombrero which completely shaded his features. These two remained mounted, but the third man swung instantly down from the saddle, noiselessly greeting Meager as he stepped into the open doorway. He was a heavily built American, with coarse, blotted face, and wore a serenely bored. When he spoke he croaked like a frog.

"Hello, Bob!" he called out, waddling forward. "Well, I got here all right."

"So I see," with no special cordiality in the voice, which was hoarse from drink. "And you didn't come alone, Garrity; who the hell is with you?"

"Alone!" He spat out a laugh.

"Did you think I'd ride across that d—d desert, at night alone? Not for all the money you got, Bob Meager. Arvin came along with me, and we're here at Silver Springs; we run into another old pard o' yours, an' persuaded him to ride on along with us. Ain't that all right?"

"It depends! D—n you, Garrity, I told you this was to be a private affair, didn't I? Who is the fellow you brought along from Silver Springs?"

"Frisco—don't the—bent h—?"

"Frisco! Why, yo' G—d, I never supposed he dare show up this side the line!" He stepped out eagerly, pulling a little from the liquor he carried, yet heading straight toward the taller figure in the dim light. The latter swung down from the saddle and met him. Meager, a garrulous with drink, greeting him effusively.

"Say, I'm glad to see you, Kid," he burst forth, "but how the h—l do you dare come here? There is a lot o' guys who'd kill their own mother for the reward Arizona's got on you. Tryin' to commit suicide?"

"No, not at desperate as that, Bob," answered the other, his voice rather low and uncertain, "knew what I was doing all right, and these fellows didn't catch me asleep out at Silver Springs. I knew 'yo' they were before I joined up with them. Fact is, Bob, I was bound t' this way and willin' to have company of the right sort."

"Heeded t'is way? Huntin' me, yo' mean? What's up?"

"Nothing to worry about tonight. What I came for will wait. Safe for me here, isn't it?"

"Sure," said Meager burst into a drunken laugh. "I've cleaned out the old outfit complete. Come on, all of you, an' let's have a drink. Hey even spring backward, a burly form crowded just her into the opening, completely blocking it, while directly confronting her, grinning malevolently, stood Juan Sanchez. She knew, with out seeing, who was behind her—Bob Meager, chuckling, drunk satisfaction. It was the shrinking, frightened woman against the opposite wall who spoke first.

"I—I didn't want to do it," she groaned hysterically. "He—he made me; he—he said he'd kill me if I didn't. My G—d, what do these men want of you?"

"Shut up!" roared Meager angrily.

"Run the old fool back into her room."

With a single sharp cry, she sprang wildly backward, jerked herself free from Sanchez' hasty grip, and dashed headlong for the door leading into the hall. The startled Mexican and Meager, springing forward to intercept her flight, collided, cursing and striking at each other in that instant of confusion, while she dug open the door and swept out, untouched, into the hall. Her mind confused but one thought as she ran her own room, the weapon in the bureau drawer. She could defend herself there; kill herself, kill him, if necessary! He should never touch her—never! She was free now, and would be helpless in his hands never again. She would die first, die gladly, but Bob Meager would never possess her alive. The drunker狂怒地冲向她，而她则冲向门，撞倒了他。

"Oh, cut out the hot air, Garrity."

Crows Will Pick Up Human Speech.

Nearly all the true crows, as well as many of their avian relatives, will pick up more or less of human speech in captivity; and it is sometimes hard to believe that the shyness with which they invest their remarks, their aptness and ingenuity, are altogether accidental.

Ambre is a fossilized resin found in geological deposits. The heavy drops of resin are brought out of trees by the hot sun. The red tree is one instance. These balls of resin drop from the tree and sink into the earth. Each year the resin goes deeper below the surface. After a thousand years have elapsed the resin has become fossilized and is mixed in large pieces. The beads for comb, necklaces, and bracelets are cut and polished from the mixed amber. There are many varieties of amber, such as stone amber, water amber, flower amber, black jet amber and wax amber. The latter is yellow in color and transparent.

Juan, and shut the door on her. Go on; I'll take care of the girl. Rather foolish you that time, I reckon, young Judy."

She looked him coldly, contemptuously, in the face, conscious of the struggle to remove the older woman. "Don't try to remain, Mrs. Meager," she said quietly. "Go back to your room. I can take care of myself."

"But—but, 'dearie,' what is it they want to do with you?"

Deborah laughed bitterly, so doleful by then as to be crackles.

"Marry me to this drunken brute," she explained, "this delightful stepson of yours. There is nothing you can do to help me; so go on back to your room; please go!"

Sanchez, grinning still, as though he enjoyed the task, forced the helpless woman down the hall. He shoved her roughly into her room, closed and locked the door. Deborah heard the fall on the floor within, but her eyes were upon the threatening face of Bob Meager.

"Well?" she said sharply, "you seem to have won the first round?"

"You bet I have. There wasn't no need breaking in there when there was an easier way. So you ain't going to make no row?"

"I have not said what I mean to do."

"An' I don't give a d—n," roughly. "Only I'd like to know whether you're going along by yourself, or whether we got to drag you? It's one or the other of them two things."

"Along where?"

"To the living room, of course. That's where I aim to have the ceremony pulled off."

The girl thought quickly. Resistance there and then was absolutely useless. Both men were armed; and one of them, at least, was crazy drunk. It would be better to appear to yield, to seem reconciled to the inevitable.

She was weakless, unable to put up any defense; perhaps in the larger room some better opportunity for action might present itself. If she lulled their suspicions, led them to believe that she was conquered, she might be able to snatch revolver from some holster, or even evade them and rush back to the safety of her own room. It was a grim, ghastly chance, but she could think of none better.

"I prefer going there by myself," she said, wondering at the steadiness of her voice, watchful of the expression on Meager's leering face. "Not touch me; don't dare to touch me."

The fellow laughed, but there was a snarl in his tone.

"All right; so the cat has still got claws, has she? Well, I guess I can wait putting hands on you; it won't be long. Go on ahead, then. Come along, Sanchez."

In spite of her regarding him, the girl walked firmly, never so much as turning her head to glance at the two behind her. She must act her part, play her character, permit them to think her indifferent to results, yet in no way afraid. Without a question she opened the door herself at the end of the narrow hall, and stepped into the room beyond. There were two men in the room, the short, thick Mexican called Arvin, sprawling on settee, and the judge, sunk into the easy chair, where old Tom Meager had sat for so many years, calmly smoking a pipe. At their entrance the fellow got upon his feet and bowed, the pipe still in his hand. Deborah looked anxiously about for the other—the "Frisco Kid"—but he was not in the room. Then, ignoring the hand Garrity held out, her eyes fastened upon the face before her. She never before had seen a countenance more repulsive or so deeply marked by desperation, and her heart seemed to choke her before the sudden stare of those big eyes and the bestial grin of the thick lips.

"You—you are the Justice from 'No-gales?' she asked doubtfully.

"That's what I am; Judge Cornelius Garrity, makin' out on service."

"And you were asked to come out here to marry me to Bob Meager?"

"Maybe so, if you are the girl."

"I am Deborah Meredith. I want to appeal to you, Judge Garrity, as an officer of the law, to refuse to perform this marriage."

"Refuse? I refuse Bob? Why, it's all straight enough. I've got the license here all made out regular with your name on it."

"That is just the point. That's where I was procured without my consent or knowledge. I repudiate it; I refuse to assent to it in any way. I have never agreed to marry Bob Meager. I am here now under threat, and I appeal to you for protection."

"My dear young woman," he began hoarsely, "I was told before coming here that you were somewhat temperamental, and might therefore desire not to proceed with the ceremony. I shall not be swayed in any way by such intrusions. My own duty is plain: the papers are in correct form; Mr. Meager assures me that he had your consent, and has acted in accordance with your own wishes in the matter. It is too late at this hour to change your mind. I trust you will see the justice of this and make no further objections."

THURSDAY, AUGUST 23, 1923.

NOW that the encampment of the National Guard has closed and people have time to reflect, everyone is in accord in the opinion that this has been the most orderly and pleasant camp ever held in Grayling. The men were put upon their honor to conduct themselves in an orderly manner. The experiment more than proved its worth. Not a single misdemeanor has been reported in town; and there have been no signs of drunkenness anywhere.

The closing days of the camp were spent in practical demonstrations by the Artillery and Cavalry units and for several days the booms of big guns were heard in Grayling and even as far away as Frederic. The officers are delighted with the newly formed ranges and with the results of their experiments. The last troop trains pulled thru Grayling Tuesday night and with the exception of a few clean-up detachments, and Quartermaster corps, the camp is again quiet.

COUNTIES TO EXHIBIT AT BAY CITY FAIR

Crawford county is included in the list of several Michigan counties for whose direct benefit the management of the NorthEastern Michigan fair association at Bay City has arranged a competitive special county exhibition of different farm products at the 1923 fair which opens at 1 p.m. City August 27, and continues through the last five days of this month.

The sole purpose of these special county exhibits is to add encouragement to the production of fruits and farm crops in the newer sections of the state. Hundreds of farmers from the 17 counties which support the coming fair have thus far been informed of the proposal to include this county exhibit program in the horticultural department and many have written L. C. Hale, Secretary, congratulatory notes, commending the action of the management of the association.

Each exhibit should include samples of, (A) grains and seeds, (B) fruits, and (C) vegetables. Any of the aforementioned articles competing in one of these county exhibits will not be permitted to compete elsewhere at the fair.

All such county exhibits must be made by bona fide residents, groups or societies of the county which is competing. No more than one premium will be awarded any county. The management has staked off considerable space in the mammoth agriculture building so as to provide for the grouping together of these county exhibits which are expected from all parts of NorthEastern Michigan.

JOE GAVENDI PINCHED.

Sheriff Peter F. Jorgenson took Joe Gavendi to Bay City Friday afternoon of last week under a federal warrant charging him with violation of the Prohibition law. The latter is out on $1,000 bonds, awaiting trial.

One officer claims that he had suspicioned for a long time that Gavendi was selling booze. It was only by accident that he was apprehended at this time. Sheriff Jorgenson and Night Marshal Al Cripps were watching M-14 highway near the planning mill, looking for a stolen auto that was reported to be on the way to Grayling from Roscommon. They were stopping all cars for inspection.

Finally Mr. Gavendi came along and would not stop when the officers tried to have him do so, but instead stepped on the gas and pulled out in a hurry. This angered the Sheriff and he immediately started in pursuit of the fleeing auto. They followed it to the Gavendi home near the cemetery and their found beneath the folds of Mrs. Gavendi's skirt in the auto a jug of moonshine.

Joe was placed under arrest with the result that he now will have to tell his story to the jury in Federal court at their next session which will probably be held some time next fall.

The cornerstone of the new board of commerce building at Saginaw, was laid by the Masonic Grand Lodge of Michigan. The building, when finished, is intended to house all the varied community activities that a board of commerce implies. The impressive ceremonies of the Masonic cornerstone ritual, presided over by Grand Master Charles A. Durand, of Flint, were carried out in full form. President George H. Boyd, told something of the objects of the organization in undertaking the construction of the building.

Completion of concrete highways between Ann Arbor and Detroit and between Grand Rapids and Grand Haven, has been approved by the state administration board. Contracts were let for the stretch of road between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti needed to connect up the concrete on M-53, while other contracts were let for connecting bits of road near Marne on M-16, supplying the parts of the road between Grand Haven and Grand Rapids not finished or under contract at the present time.

A report submitted to the board showed that the boat now in service coast about $25,000 and is averaging about $500 a day receipts, although its rates are far lower than those formerly in force. It is the plan of Gov. Groesbeck and other board members to ultimately make the ferry service free, as part of the state highway system.

He took up the chair as a fireman passed his home, but suddenly fell dead. The alarm, it later was discovered, was false.

The D. U. R. is officially an outcast in River Rouge. "Get out and stay out" ordered the River Rouge council last week. The railroad was told in a resolution introduced by Mayor Thomas Brewster and adopted unanimously, to remove its tracks from River Rouge's streets and to halt forever any operations within the city's limits.

These islands, now supposed to be part of Wisconsin, are claimed by Michigan.

Articles of a coalition of the Saratoga Transit Company have been filed with the secretary of state, also a motion with the Paddle Utility company, asking approval of the name of the company that is to operate Saratoga transportation system and carry out her oft-repeated threat of making a separate settlement with the Germans.

Chancellor Stresemann's ministry, the first co-operation government in the history of Germany, is the most promising set formed and it has been given a strong vote of confidence by the Reichstag. With the loyal support of the army it has succeeded in suspending the attempted revolt of Communists except in Brunswick.

Adopting the Hindenburg program prepared by the late Cuno government, it is about to put the country on a gold basis by means of a huge gold loan and a plan of taxation that will compel industrial magnates to pay up.

In this first address to the Reichstag Chancellor Stresemann said Germany, which still insist on complete restoration of Alsace-Lorraine in the occupied territory and the release of Germans imprisoned there by the French and Belgians as a condition for cessation of passive resistance, but it appeared his attitude was slightly more conciliatory than that which he had assumed, and for which he was unable to recede. In Berlin it is understood the government is considering a proposal in France for a demilitarization similar to that between the United States and Great Britain, one of the main points being that Germany shall assume France's debt to the United States. As a preliminary Germany would first send a joint note to France, Great Britain and America admitting that previous efforts to meet reparations payments have not been sufficiently strong, and that the government is willing to go much further, both in the amount and in the guarantees.

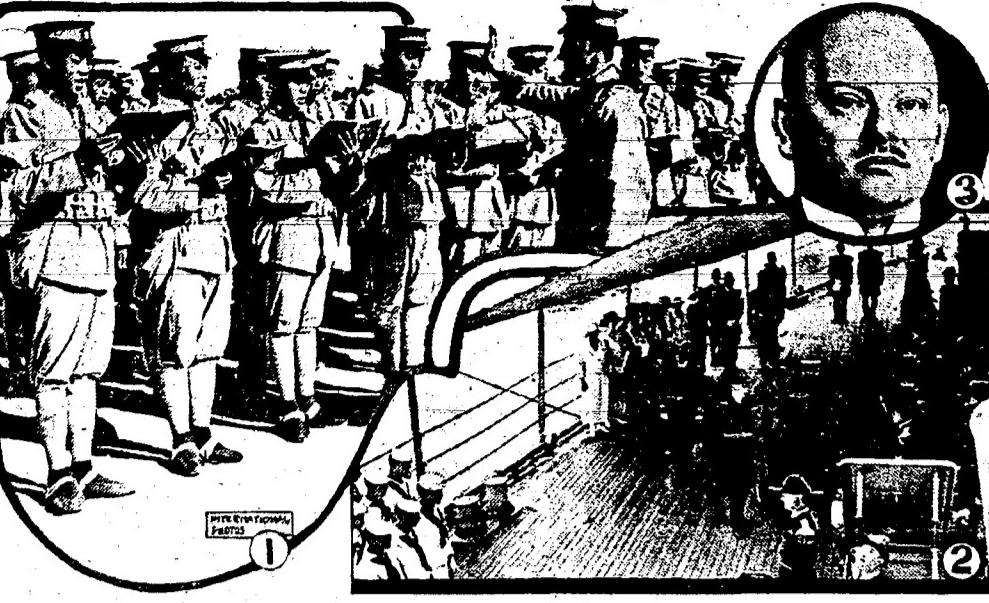

Arbold Rechberg, an industrialist leader, offers a plan for French participation in German industry which is being favorably discussed. He says his acceptance depends largely on the question of percentage of French participation. Germany offers 30 percent in new stocks, and France demands 51 percent.

France cannot leave the Ruhr without showing to its people that it got something," said Herr Rechberg, "and with stocks shaying a large participation in German industry, it would achieve its purpose. Likewise Germany and France can co-operate industrially successfully to the advantage of both."

GERMANY'S NEW GOVERNMENT

Stresemann Likely to Negotiate With France—President Coolidge's Policies Made Clearer—Anthracite Coal Strike Is Not Yet Averted—Recognition of Mex.—

——Is Near:

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

OUT of the four winter of controversies in Europe it appears now that some practical motion of settling the problems may arise soon England is soon to France with regard to the Versailles treaty provides that all reparations must be paid before the intercalated debts are recognized and whether President Wilson's 14 points provide that the allies' pensions are among the obligations which Germany must assume.

If ad-consolidatory plans fail, President Coolidge will continue the negotiations of the R.R. with increased vigor and if necessary will seize the port of Antwerp to Frankfort and other cities in that rich region. This would practically cut Germany off from the Rhine and end in a state of economic crisis. The plan supports Flanders right and of course the Rhine areas of the Rhine.

American negotiators have been overtaking the Cuneo government and Gustav Stresemann has formed a new ministry. Confounding the expectations of the Allies, Germany is now more inclined than ever to negotiate with France and the

NEW MEN BEHIND BOSTON RED SOX

Golf Poor Money Game

Note the difference between the rewards of golf and, let us say, prize fighting. Hal Crankshank, the professional and runner-up to Bobby Jones, won the grand prize at Inwood, he would have received $500. Bobby Jones, amateur, received a metal trophy emblematic of the champion ship, worth little. Compare the material reward of the biggest thing in golf with the rewards of a parabolic encounter of the first class. If one wants to make money in competition, golf is not the game.

Gets Varsity Sweater After Waiting 50 Years

Fifty years after he starred as a pitcher on a University of Wisconsin baseball team, recognition in the form of the coveted "W" came to W. Hulse, of the class of 1883.

The athletic "W" sash award was made to Mr. Hulse before the 50th of regents. Frank Neumann, of the athletic department, presented the sweater to the veteran, who was a familiar figure in campus activities a half century ago.

At the time Mr. Hulse qualified for the "W," award sweaters were not given to athletes, and it was not until several years afterward that this award was voted. Mr. Hulse in the meantime had entered business in Boulder, Colo., and it was not until this year that he found opportunity to come to Madison and claim his "W" sweater.

Boxing in Australia Is Booming, Says J. Munro

Boxing in Australia is beginning to boom again despite the lack of good material, according to Jack Munro, general manager of Stadiums, Ltd. Third-class American boxers are averaging $2,000 a fight. Munro writes that he is developing several new stars who will make visiting Americans extend themselves. One is Jack Dale, an eighteen-year-old lightweight, who has beaten everything in sight. Ted Lewis, who manages Jimmie Wilde, is going to send over a team of boxers from England, but he refused to sign a contract for Wilde. Australia no longer can afford to import men of Wilde's type.

AROUND THE DIAMOND

Boston scouts promise much for Al Bert T. Herman, the Colgate infielder, who has signed with the Braves.

The Kansas City Blues' new ball park seats 16,000 fans.

There has been some comment in the Mint tongue over the release by London of Chuck Zolla and Buck Boyle.

Clarence (Chick) Galloway of the Athletics, while out with a broken finger, was permitted to go to his home in Asheville, S. C., for a visit.

The Worcester club gave releases to Pitcher Ross Roberts and Charles Duffey, as parts of Manager Jesse Burkett's plan to rebuild the team.

Chester Torkelson, released as manager of the Pittsburgh team of the Cotton States League, joined the laurel team of the same league.

Infielder Bobby Barrett has been obtained by the Wichita Falls club of the Texas league under an optional agreement from the Chicago Nationals.

Harry Heilmann of the Detroit Tigers is the American league's leading batsman.

Birmingham fans are tickled over the deal with Memphis that gave the Barons Holt Miller in exchange for Tommy Taylor.

Bert Whaling, veteran catcher, who has been with the Des Moines team this season, was given his release so that he might accept an appointment as an umpire on the Western league staff.

Just when you have determined to lead a better life and love all your fellow, some umpire makes that kind of decision.

To make room for Pitcher Lefty Roe, recalled from Harrisburg, the Chattanooga club released Pitcher Charles Guess.

Arthur Johnson, a member of the family of pitchers of that illustrious name, has been sent by the Pittsburgh club to Willamport of the New York Pennsylvania League.

Age Retards Athlete

Age and its relation to athletics is coming in for considerable attention just now.

Kilbane at thirty-four was an older man physically than Jess Willard at forty. Over in England there is a man, Major George Putnam, who is eighty years old, and he plays lawn tennis every day.

Flitzsimmons was Kilbane's age when he won the heavyweight championship. The Senior Golfers' association has many members in the 60's and 70's who play better golf now than men in their 30's.

It all depends pretty much on how a man takes care of himself.

In professional sport an athlete is regarded as a veteran after a few years of competition. Ball players and boxers can be under thirty and be referred to as veterans. Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion, is a dapper young person, but boxing fans speak of him as the veteran lightweight champion.

"They're so quick-tempered and they are light so hard. We're not as they are at all, no indeed."

"I believe you," said Billie Brownie. "Another time I want to have more of a talk with you but today I have an engagement with a llama and I don't think one should keep a llama waiting. I have a feeling one shouldn't do that."

"Well, stop for a chat again, Billie Brownie," said Grey Squirrel, as he gave his tail a fine flourish in saying good-by to Billie Brownie.

"Well, am I on time?" asked Billie Brownie as he came to where the llama was.

"I'm sure I don't know," said the llama. "I haven't any wrist watch and I haven't any clock, and if I had I couldn't tell the time. Of course I can tell time by the sun, moon and stars."

"You're Very Welcome, Billie."

Made in slipover fashion, they are easily adjusted and this is in their favor.

Novelty of such features especially the dresser models for children, beginning from three-year-old to six-year-old, the latter producing interesting lace-like effects. Note that it is the combination of plain stitch with fancy rib which contributes to the charm of the knitted frock in the picture. The popular soleil effect is introduced and the sailor collar expresses youthful touch. One can sense from this portrait that the autumn knit frocks for little tots will carry a vast amount of style and novelty features.

"I only hoped I hadn't kept you waiting," said Billie Brownie. "I am thankful that I haven't."

"No," said the llama. "I haven't been kept waiting. Of course I am here and ready to see you, but I didn't pace about and say:

"Dear me, why is Billie Brownie so late? I can't settle down to anything while waiting."

"No, I didn't say anything of that sort."

"I am glad to hear that," chuckled Billie Brownie. "And you promised me to tell me something of yourself, if you remember, and if it is not too much bother."

"I remember and it is not too much bother," said the llama.

"First of all, I come from South America, and I am a little bit like a camel except that I am much smaller and I haven't any hump, nor have I bumps."

"I have a relative, known as the Guanaco."

"Then I have an Alpaca cousin. His family name has become famous for there is a cloth known as alpaca cloth and that has come from the fleece of his family."

"The Alpaca family aren't so strong as we are away from their home mountains and they object to other climates which don't bother us at all."

"Of course you know we have always been useful in carrying bundles and packages and have been regular 'beasts of burden' as the saying is."

"We have lovely long wavy hair as you can see, but there is an Alpaca cousin here, a white one, with blue eyes. That's quite an interesting thing for, somehow, when thinking of blue eyes people would think of a little girl and not of an Alpaca."

"But you said you had another engagement to keep. I don't want to get delayed."

"Yes," said Billie Brownie, "I promised I'd run in for afternoon bread with the Bears. That is, I didn't exactly say I'd run in—but I said that I would look on as the bears are to have their afternoon bread shortly."

"The keeper told me they had it just as people will have afternoon—the same idea you know!"

"So I must be off. Thank you immensely for your story."

"You're very welcome, Billie Brownie. Very welcome indeed!"

LLAMA TALK

Billie Brownie was on his way to visit the llama in the zoo when he was stopped by having a talk with the Grey Squirrel who had been busy eating peanuts for some time and who was ready to take a short rest and chit-chat.

"Yes," the Grey Squirrel told Billie Brownie. "It is quite true what you have heard. Our family and the Red Squirrel family have always been quarrelsome and have not been on too friendly terms. Of course we say it is the fault of the Red Squirrel and I suppose they say the same of us."

"But I'm quite sure that the fair opinion is that it is the fault of the Red Squirrels that we do not get along together. Yes, I'm sure of that."

"They're so quick-tempered and they are light so hard. We're not as they are at all, no indeed."

"I believe you," said Billie Brownie.

"Another time I want to have more of a talk with you but today I have an engagement with a llama and I don't think one should keep a llama waiting. I have a feeling one shouldn't do that."

Many of the new models make appeal with girdle line. A particularly pretty knitted frock this style is further enhanced with a trim of several harmonizing shades, knitted spiraling into sleeve border and wide girdle. Another clever idea is an all-over open-work knit dress fashioned with a full skirt almost like a baller, with a little belt so low on the hips as to give a plump silhouette.

N.E. MICHIGAN FAIR BAY CITY AUG 27-31

Mr. Edwin S. Chalker of Crawford County, has recently announced his belief that the Northeastern Michigan fair which opens at Bay City on August 27 to continue through for the following five days will be the biggest and most successful fair ever attempted in Northeastern Michigan. Mr. Chalker is a director of the fair association and represents Crawford county in the management of affairs which are so beneficial to city and rural folks.

This year the premium list for the fair has been revised. New shows have been engaged and space on the midway has been let to large amusement managers who have contracted to give Northeastern Michigan residents, through the medium of this giant fair, the latest and most novel entertainments so far as midway attractions and thrill commanded are concerned. Races, games, band contests, fireworks displays, huge midway, automobile shows, displays of all kinds of cattle exhibits of manufactured as well as hand-made articles, a free children's day for all kiddies under 12 years of age, floral exhibits, and a hundred more that will add to the setting of this year's fair are included in the program of events which will go to satisfy the motto of the association—“Something doing every minute.”

C. H. Hall, secretary of the fair, summarizes the opinion of his directors and the managers of the movements “on the fair” in the mere sentence, “It'll be the biggest ever,” but these few words mean a lot for they past few weeks the NorthEastern Michigan fair has grown to such proportions that it has come to be ranked among the first five Michigan fairs.

Mr. Hall is not satisfied of the present
